fanning the flames

Each day we can turn on the news and hear about awful conflicts that are taking place around the world. Often we feel pretty helpless, feeling too far away to be able to do anything other than to sympathise with the victims, and if we are able, to donate to charities trying to alleviate the suffering. Yet there is something that we could do as a nation which could make a real difference: end the promotion and the export of weapons and military equipment, particularly to countries engaged in conflict.

Campaign Against Arms Trade's new campaign, Fanning the Flames, aims to build agreement around the idea that we can make a positive effect on the world by stopping the promotion of arms,

In 2002, the UK exported arms to over 150 countries. The government has even licensed arms to twenty countries engaged in serious conflict since 1997.

particular to countries engaged in conflict. We are convinced that the closure of the Defence Services Export Organisation (DESO), the government agency that promotes arms exports will make a real difference. Send for a FREE campaign pack today.
